A good image isn't always a good Photoshop-quality image, however. Because an original image might be retouched by a photographer or might have been taken with a low-resolution camera, it's not always clear what kind of quality to expect. Depending on the image, you may have a choice of how to import it. Because the quality of the original may not be great, you

A three-star general in the Israeli military has called on world leaders to renew efforts to end the conflict in Syria by working with Russia and Iran. Maj.-Gen. (res.) Yehuda Zadok wrote in the New York Times that Israel shares the view that Syrian President Bashar Assad must go but warns against encouraging the Arab states that have aligned themselves with Iran and Russia to topple the Syrian leader. The Israeli military is concerned that if Assad is removed, his successors might be friendly to Iran. Get The Times of Israel's Daily Edition by email and never miss our top stories Free Sign Up The colonel's statement comes ahead of planned talks in Vienna between Syria and international powers aimed at ending the war. “Israel’s position is that Bashar Assad cannot remain as a civilian authority,” Zadok said in the article published Tuesday. “The best outcome in the short run would be a transition of power in Syria in which a relatively pro-Western, or at least neutral, government that respects human rights and liberties would continue in power, while the bad players in Syria would cease to dominate the scene,” Zadok said. Israel has never officially admitted to carrying out airstrikes inside Syria, and there are strong indications that it has never done so. However, a 2016 report by the UN-established Commission of Inquiry said at least 100 Israeli airstrikes had hit targets in Syria, most of them struck during the so-called “Operation Northern Shield,” which targeted Iranian and Hezbollah assets and infrastructure and was launched late last year. In other portions of the Middle East, the IS group is facing military pressure on several fronts including in Iraq. Zadok warned that Islamic State was a threat to Israel and called on countries in the region to establish a common front in the fight against the jihadist group. “Israel’s interest is to see a successful denuclearization of Iran and a political resolution to the civil war in Syria,” he said. “But Israel cannot force the Arab states to settle their differences themselves, nor should Israel have any interest in solving their problems for them,” he added. “Israel must demand that the Arab states that have allied themselves with Iran and Russia in the civil war against Assad come together in a united front against Daesh (Islamic State) and their Iranian sponsors.” Chemical control of
