My only book on...Q: How do you detect the curve of a waveform? I'm working on a project that involves detecting if a tone has been interrupted. What I'm doing at the moment is amplifying the tone in an exclusive-OR gate, and then trying to detect any differences with respect to the original, but this is of course not the most precise way to do it. I'd like to know how to do this with some sort of waveform detection function. (Apologies if this is an off-topic question, but I think this is a relevant "non-coding" question. Hopefully that makes sense!) A: Not sure what you mean by detecting an interruption in a tone (since in my experience both waveshape-analytics and envelope detection do exactly the same thing), but in the case of frequency modulation and digital modulation there are several ways to do it. Basics If you have a continuous input signal A and, for instance, a tone signal B that will not last
