Q: Did the Church compile stories about the saints when the books first came out? It occurs to me that many of the saints had a story about them once they were canonized. These stories seem to be the main source of information about the saints to come out of the 19th and 20th centuries. Did the Church ever gather the stories of the saints (or friends of the Church) and collate them into the first editions of the lives? I can't imagine that they were just left to live in the churches. It also seems like something the Church might have done to bring in more revenue at the time. A: I am not aware of any source that I would consider authoritative regarding this. However, I can provide two interesting anecdotes. The first anecdote was shared in a discussion of the canonization of St Peter Claver by (I think) Cardinal Cushing. The discussion was at a Mass in honor of St Peter Claver at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington D.C. The Archbishop of Washington, Cardinal Keeler, made the announcement of canonization at the Mass. The other anecdote is that I met some Archbishops during a trip to the Philippines, and they mentioned to me that the stories of the canonized saints were regularly recorded and published during their time, although the number of saints that were canonized was much smaller than the number of saints that died. The situation of psychiatrists in local psychiatric hospitals in Lebanon. The authors describe the practice of psychiatry in local, public sector psychiatric hospitals in Lebanon and assess the psychiatrist-patient ratio. All of the 33 private and public sector psychiatric hospitals in Lebanon are visited and the psychoanalytic-orientated practice and the content of psychotherapy sessions in each case are recorded. In addition, data on the population of psychiatrist and psychiatrist-patients ratio and the number of beds are collected. The authors found that most of the patients seen in these hospitals suffer from mild and transitory conditions with many of them being admitted for psychiatric reasons of a relief nature. With the exception of the psychiatric clinic in one of the general hospitals, the majority of the patients are treated by only one or two psychiatrists, either in individual sessions or at weekly or monthly group sessions of less than five hours, regardless of the number of beds. Only one of the hospitals had a ratio of psychiatrist to patient in excess of two, whereas the other had a ratio

Q: How to interpret the expectation of a squared gaussian distribution Let $X\sim\mathcal{N}(\mu,\sigma^2)$ be a gaussian random variable and γ be a non negative real. We define the following random variable: $$Y=X^2-\gamma$$ How can we interpret the expectation of Y with respect to X? Is there an analytical expression? And what is the probability of Y being positive? (Note that Y is not positive surely.) A: If we want a single parameter solution, say, $\gamma=1,$ and we have a measurement at distance θ from the mean, we can solve for $\mu,$ $$Y = \theta^2 - \sigma^2 = X^2 - 1,$$ and plug in $\sigma^2=1.$ We have, by symmetry, $$P(Y 0) = P(-1 0) = P(\theta^2 > 0),$$ so $$ P(Y > 0) = \frac{1}{2}.$$ Comparison of co-treatment of SiO2,TiO2,SiO2/TiO2 with PMMA and Gla-P for minimizing oral complications following sialadenectomy: A randomized clinical trial.
