AutoCAD is licensed as freeware for home and non-commercial use. To purchase a license for commercial use, a user must subscribe to AutoCAD, available at the AutoCAD website. By default, AutoCAD is licensed to run on Windows 7 and newer; AutoCAD LT was originally only for use on Windows Vista and older. Main features [edit] CAD tools can be used for creating 2D and 3D drawings in plan, section, and detail views. A variety of design objects and geometric solids can be used, including circles, lines, arcs, circles, arcs, 3D rectangles, cylinders, and spheres, 3D meshes, and various complex 3D solids, including rooms, furniture, and many other objects. Solids can be created by importing multiple files (for example, a 2D building plan plus a 3D model), or by drawing solids directly. In addition, several formats can be used to export and save designs, including DWG, DXF, and PDF. User interface [edit] The user interface consists of the Graphical User Interface (GUI), the Navigation Bar, the toolbar, the status bar, the menubar, and the palettes. The drawing area is initially populated with the AutoCAD application icon, a 3D view of the house, and a 2D view of the user's computer screen. The drawing area is initially populated with the AutoCAD application icon, a 3D view of the house, and a 2D view of the user's computer screen. The status bar, which is at the top-center of the drawing area, provides messages such as the current zoom level and rendering time. Navigation bars [edit] Navigation bars, which appear in the upper-left corner, can be placed on the left or right side of the drawing area. A left-side navigation bar contains common tools, such as the drawing menu and the zoom tool, as well as a palette, a 3D view, a 2D view, and a numeric pad. The right-side navigation bar contains a drawing palette and a list of open drawings. The location of a navigation bar can be changed by selecting it and dragging it to a new position, or by clicking and dragging the navigation bar. Navigation bars may also be hidden by selecting the navigation bar and clicking the Hide command button. Navigation bars can be placed on the

The suspected shooter, identified as an 18-year-old man from the nearby town of Kerpen, was found shot to death outside the school, authorities said. Police said they were confident of the gunman's identity, but were still investigating the motive. The shooting broke out around 10:15 a.m. local time in a wooded area of the Limburg School, a low-cost vocational college located about an hour southwest of Frankfurt. Police said the gunman opened fire with a machine gun, apparently from a distance, then fled on foot. Munster Mayor Bodo Stahl said the suspect was not known to police, and there was no indication of a link to terrorism. "It's a terrible day for Munster. It's an incident that will change our city forever," he said, according to The Associated Press. "I am grateful for the solidarity shown by our citizens." The Regional Administrative Court of Darmstadt ruled that the boy should be held at a psychiatric hospital for at least four weeks, according to the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung newspaper. Police said the shooter was a student at the college, but it wasn't immediately clear whether he was a student at the high
