UPCOMING CHANGES/AMENDMENTS(submitting a PR causes it to be considered by the pre-release users group) 1. internal site: Add new section to the admin panel called "Player" with a variety of user configurable filters including user name, real name, avatar, role, and "active," "not active," and "participating" states. This will allow for a variety of filtering to help find relevant content faster, along with a new way to restrict content to the current user role. A "User Preferences" section will be added to allow a user to select a player profile setting for any given filter (a common one might be to always view characters who are in their current role, another might be to always be notified when a character is active, and still another might be to always be notified when a character is active and is in their "Not Active" filter setting). In addition, add the ability for players to customize their player experience by allowing them to generate their own player group avatars and user profiles and display names. For those who find the site difficult to navigate, there is a new "Right-Click" menu button added to the search bar and "site map" menus to allow for quicker navigation. 2. searching: When viewing a page with search results for a specific role, add an ability for players to limit search results to characters with that role, and optionally also a filter for characters who are or are not in that role, to help streamline the user experience. This will be done by adding an "in" or "out" drop down box to a few specific search results pages to allow players to filter search results in this manner. For example, if you know all your characters are currently active, then the option to "In Active" can be applied to that specific filter to limit search results to only active characters, while you can still filter out active characters using the "Out Active" filter option. 3. Improve content filtering with new Player settings. Over time, the player experience will be expanded to allow for the ability to restrict content to any combination of a character's

Antonball Deluxe Lite is a Frogger-clone game released for the Game Boy Color (GBC) handheld game system as an official Game Boy Advance game in 2001 with a portable version in 2002. The game follows the original game, but instead of using just one screen, Antonball Deluxe Lite uses three screens to present the puzzle. The version difference comes from the digitized voices. This was the first title for Outernet and Turbine. Story and modes Antonball Deluxe Lite follows the same storyline as the original Antonball. While the arcade version's score includes only the player's score, the home version's score combines player's score and the owner's score. The player can choose between the game's 'Mania Mode' and 'Hot Soup Mode' which can be unlocked by collecting three "Z" stats (Shredded Pizza, Beer, and Chips), with 15 stages in Mania Mode, and 10 stages in Hot Soup Mode. The third screen can be unlocked by collecting 12 stars along the route of the player's fish. There are five courses in Mania Mode and eight in Hot Soup Mode. In Mania Mode, the goal is to collect the most stars before matching the boss to receive a "Z". In Hot Soup Mode, the player must make the minimum number of 'points' along the route to gain a 'Boost' depending on his or her 'Speed', with 13 courses in Hot Soup Mode. More than just obstacles and enemies, the Antonball Deluxe Lite features swarms of cats and insects (aka "Mousy" characters). The game has a total of eight types: "Mousy 1", "Mousy 2", "Vomit Mousy", "Blind Mousy", "Brain Mousy", "Sexy Mousy", "Elegant Mousy", "Rainbow Mousy". Mousy and fans of Antonball can catch hidden Mousy inside eight Mousy traps so long as the player has a "Mousy Found" bonus. Collecting all Mousy traps yields one of four different prizes: "Mousy Coin", "Bad Mousy", "Moose Mousse", and "Forty Thieves". Differences between Arcade, GBC, and GBA versions The only difference between the Arcade, GBC, and GBA versions is the player's handling of weapons and the bonus money awarded for collecting them. Instead of being used during the "Battle" stage where players must restart their fish with a weaker

We give a warm feeling for the players with some classical treatments of lighting and coloring. The color gray comes from the lighting, but it doesn't seem to be limited to that. Here is the light source: The way the game works is simple. You can choose from two characters in the game: A kid named Damon and a girl named Ryou. Each of them has their own strengths and they share the same weakness. They both have 3-way movements which mean they can walk left, right, forward, and backward. So as you play the game, you have to be aware of the character who starts in the front of the game. And avoid certain elements when you are chasing one of the characters. You will learn to play the game quickly since you have two characters, and the difference of each character's skill will help you to play the game easily. Game Control The game has a simple but easy controls to play. You can choose a character in the game through the "Change" option, and then you can control with a joystick or click the table.
