A large number of processing techniques have been evolved to convert crude oil into its higher value products. For example, a refinery distills crude oil at elevated temperatures to recover the lighter commercial petroleum products (LP) such as gasoline, jet fuel, kerosene and diesel. Lighter hydrocarbonaceous feedstocks, such as natural gas, ethane, naphtha, crude oil products and blends thereof are also cracked in a catalytic cracker to produce lighter hydrocarbonaceous products such as propylene, ethylene, propane, iso-butane, n-butane, n-pentane, n-pentane, and the like, as well as lower molecular weight hydrocarbonaceous gases such as C2 to C5+ hydrocarbons for further refinery processing such as ethane, propane, iso-butane, n-butane, iso-pentane, n-pentane and the like. In addition to the natural gas, a refinery will receive various other hydrocarbonaceous feedstreams such as natural crude oil, atmospheric column bottoms (ACB), vacuum column bottoms (VCB), topped crude, straight run gas oil, reduced crude, hydrotreated products, catalytically treated plant off-gas, and the like. These hydrocarbonaceous feedstreams are cracked in the refinery to yield more valuable distillates and oils, as well as valuable hydrocarbonaceous gases. Refinery off-gases also contain significant quantities of hydrocarbonaceous gases. A vacuum gas oil (VGO) unit is the heart of a refinery, where a large portion of the lighter material (i.e. distillate) is collected. The off-gas containing off-gas from the VGO unit is burned to produce heat used

Every minute, every game Every minute in a game carries significant meaning. The game's new total time-on-task, or TOT, mechanic now allows players to gain, lose, or control time throughout a game. Every decision affects this as players have full control over tactics to maximize TOT, or minimize it to take control of a game.
