Working with Painted and Drawers Photoshop specializes in the transformation of raster images into another kind of raster image: vector (or vector) images, which have no picture dots but consist of lines and paths that you can manipulate in any direction. You can shape, stretch, and rotate them just as you would a real-world vector shape, such as a circle, ellipse, or line. You also can use a built-in line tool to draw lines in your image that you can manipulate like vector objects and edit with some of the same tools, including paint. You can keep the raster image on its own or you can turn it into a vector image, which is very useful for creating and manipulating working drawings, maps, illustrations, and other common business graphics. Photoshop also can alter the raster image's drawing properties. You can apply filters, such as brightening, softening, and other effects that you can create yourself, as well as edit photographs. This technique is useful for placing objects on your images and altering the tone of your image, as well as restoring an image that has faded or was overexposed. You can also manipulate vector objects to alter or draw the shape of the object and manipulate it to fit within the confines of an image. Vector images can be complex to work with, but you can use tools to help you in this process. For more on working with vector images, visit www.Adobe.com/products/photoshop. Painted images are about as close to real-world images as Photoshop comes. You paint graphics in the layers of an image using bitmap files or paintbrush tools. For more on working with bitmaps and paint, visit www.PhotoshopWorld.com. Photoshop Elements The latest version of Photoshop, Photoshop Elements 8, is similar to PhotoShop Pro. Like the other version, Elements also has a set of tools, features, and shortcuts designed specifically to help you edit images. The design of the interface is different, as are a number of features. You can work with a file for a longer period of time than with a desktop version of Photoshop, and a single file can be opened and saved in multiple

What's New in the?

KUALA LUMPUR (THE STAR/ASIA NEWS NETWORK) - She was a successful swimmer turned fitness buff but a tragedy robbed Ms Nur Hidayah Tawiei, 25, of a promising future. Ms Nur Hidayah fell gravely ill and as her condition worsened, she was kept alive for a year before succumbing to renal failure in 2014. Last Saturday (Nov 11), her family held an event to raise funds for the treatment of three children suffering with the same condition. They are among 1,600 children in Malaysia who will receive dialysis treatment for at least five years, as a result of poor kidney function. The treatment costs RM400,000 per session, and each child needs at least four sessions a week. Ms Nur Hidayah's parents, Tuan Abu Bakar and Siti Zulaikha Tawiei, are still struggling to pay off the hefty bills, and are appealing to the public for help. To donate, visit www.givingchildren.my, or call: 03-2780 2743. "The treatment is very expensive and life-saving for our kids, but it can be cured with proper treatment," her mother, Tuan Abu Bakar, said. "We're looking for help from the public to raise funds. If we raise more money, we can give our kids proper treatment," he added. Nur Hidayah died when she was just 21, after contracting a kidney infection which made her kidneys fail. Her mother said that since her death, the family's two elder children, Jumuah and Zulaikha, are suffering from a poorly functioning liver, and the youngest, Nur Azah, has chronic cystitis, which has also affected her kidneys. "We are grateful to Aishah Dian for nominating us for this year's Kaspers, as she donated RM1,000 (S$250) for the fight against renal failure. "But we need your help to continue this struggle and raise funds for the treatment of Nur Hidayah's three kids," Tuan Abu Bakar added.
