A scenario in which the only way to survive is to hack a computer and get out before a robot arm or a uniformed security guard can reach you. I'm looking for beta-testers on Steam, itch.io, and Oculus Home. Updates and development information are available at www.patreon.com/technician Firewatch Firewatch is a 2017 American wilderness survival thriller film directed by American independent filmmaker David F. Sandberg. The film stars Jason Schwartzman and with a screenplay by Evan Daugherty. The project began production in July 2016 in Joshua Tree National Park in the United States. Firewatch was filmed with a Red One and Red Epic camera, and was released in the United States on June 17, 2017, by Amazon Studios. The film follows two wilderness fire lookouts – an experienced professional and a young romantic – employed by the Forest Service in the late 21st century, who find themselves separated in the wilderness by a national forest fire. When the guard is killed by a bear, the young woman must seek help and resolve their relationship. Alex Road Films and Mandeville Films co-produced the film, which was financed by NEON, AMC Networks, and Amazon Studios. Principal photography on the project began in Joshua Tree National Park on July 17, 2016, and lasted for approximately six weeks.

Star Trek: TNG Episode Guide Episode 1/The Naked Time (Season 1, Episode 1): 1. Introduction Malfunctions in the ship's computer are rendering the ship's instruments inaccurate, and the crew are placed in a state of restlessness. Captain Picard orders an EVA to look into the problem. 2. The Naked Time The Enterprise can no longer be detected because the ship has disappeared. Mister La Forge uses the ship's computer to search for the Enterprise. The crew investigates and it is discovered that the vessel has had to disappear to evade a nearby planet. This planet has planetoids that contain a black hole. As soon as the Enterprise leaves the planetoids it vanishes and is never found. 3. The Game Tasha Yar attempts to find a game on the Enterprise computer but is prevented from doing so. Lieutenant Dax discovers that the Enterprise is moving outside normal space. 4. The Shadow of Chargon The ship is caught in a time loop. Although the computer has been fixed, the Enterprise finds itself

Thu, 06 Dec 2010 14:23:46 +0000838 at >The processes of education maintenance, outcome evaluation and outcome research are essential to informing and evaluating the short and long-term effectiveness of adult learning interventions in developing countries where an estimated 50 per cent of the world's people live at a time when global health crises pose a significant risk to population health. This project responds to the 2004

WHO Global Call to Action on Adult Learning, which identified the issue of adult learning capacities in improving the skills and knowledge of health providers as a priority area for greater attention and investment in research. The aim of the project is to rigorously evaluate the effectiveness of an adult learning programme for health workers in Kenya, which has the potential to be used in other settings in the provision of continuing professional development of Health care providers facing HIV and AIDS. The Project incorporates 1) a three-year Process Evaluation of the HIV/AIDS Training intervention delivered to Health care Providers. 2) Participatory Outcomes Research regarding the relevance, acceptability and affordability of the intervention (The Training approach) 3) a measure of the Health Care Providers' self-efficacy in delivering EIDs/HIV/AIDS Clinical Interventions as a result of participation in the HIV/AIDS training. Using a mixed methods approach the project will: 1) describe the effectiveness of the HIV/AIDS Training intervention in enabling Health care providers to provide HIV services including care, in Kenya; 2) assess

Inside Cells, the first of several cells projects for us, was first released in 2001. It received positive reviews and won the best experiment at the Massachusetts Biotechnology Collaborative Summer Program. Inside Cells is a “room-scale” Virtual Reality experience that allows users to explore cells interactively using advanced simulation technology and organic models of the cell. Our hope is that it will open doors to students who may have a negative view of science. Inside Cells is also a useful tool for the basic cell biologist. Is there such a thing as a “life after death”? Can we physically observe it, or do we simply hope to perceive evidence of it by bringing to life a hybrid material culture containing both physical and life-like features? What can we expect from “life-like” synthetic forms? We are concerned with “life” not as a biological organism, but as the collective properties that enable a material culture to be alive in the sense that it interacts with its environment. LiveMedia runs exhibitions and public lectures as a medium for the dissemination of knowledge, particularly in subjects which are challenging, difficult or controversial. In particular the organisation engages in projects which aim to communicate what we can learn about life and our understanding of the origins of life. This process of "naturalisation" is highly problematic, in the sense that it requires the separation of the living from the non-living, the natural from the artificial. In order to be able to include both the biological and the non-biological, we need to explore the possibilities of life in the non-living. This is a four-part play that tells the story of a young man who has been fighting an ongoing battle against depression. Over the course of three years he is diagnosed with a mental illness, and is forced to look inward to become the doctor he has always been - pushing himself to go beyond his comfort zone. Using experiential theatre techniques we allow the patient to explore the development and progression of mental illness by looking at the world he has built for himself - and challenging what is, to open the possibility for what could be. This work was commissioned by BBC Radio 4 for their Continuing Education programme, 'The Healthy Mind'. It was premiered in September 2011 at The Place, London. The simulation enables users to investigate the basic cell through the movement of a virtual microorganism. Users explore the basic structure of cellular biology by controlling the movement of their species and by observing how it adapt c9d1549cdd

- The game is played as a retro platformer with added game elements - Supports both keyboard and gamepad - Interactive game elements that don't require the mouse cursor - Use the Mouse to interact with Game Objects - The game runs well on all modern systems - No need to airdrop the game; just execute the executable to begin - Supports old systems too - Overlapping Game Background Note: If the game does not start normally, close all open programs.

The object of the game is to clear the screen with a series of asteroids. You can use the special power ups to boost your speed and hit items. Kill the bosses to receive the coins they drop. Each boss has a distinct set of skills. Use them wisely! The game runs on Windows 7, 8, 8.1, 10 and Windows Server 2012, 2016 and macOS. As long as your graphics card supports OpenGL 3.0, it should run without problems! Note: Touch screen devices (tablets, smartphones and the like) don't yet work with the game. We are working on this issue. For now, use the mouse. ;) Reviews: "CPU Invaders is a refreshing and nostalgic experience. The game employs a traditional platformer formula while adding a variety of tactics and special moves. The combination of quality 8-bit graphics, original soundtrack and challenging gameplay easily makes CPU Invaders one of the best indie games on the market. While the lack of touch screen support remains a sore point, CPU Invaders is a must-have for retro fans and anyone who enjoys hard, challenging games. Share this article PoliceScotland is to publish a major new book to investigate whether political and crime bosses have been involved in the drug trade. Detectives from the force's Organised Crime Unit will publish Organised Crime – Scotland's Drug Houses in November, detailing the work of the team and the battle to tackle organised crime in Scotland. The book is the culmination of a year-long investigation led by Detective Inspector Stuart Findlay, and Senior Investigating Officer Sergeant Rebecca Patterson. The work is based on documents, covert audio recordings, CCTV footage, interviews with suspects and witnesses and intelligence. Det Insp Findlay, said: "There are thousands of books

. v. Focus Media Inc. Wet Dog Corp. v. Focus Media Inc., 501 F.3d 1045 (9th Cir. 2007), was a case heard by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, concluding that people who accessed or distributed child pornography over the internet, were subject to criminal prosecution under 18 U.S. Code § 2252A. The decision in this case held that two customers of a web site which had furnished material of child pornography constituted a "distribution" under the federal statutes. Actual details and facts of the case Focus Media, Inc. operated a web server, where copyrighted works were openly published for all to see. Various links were available for people to click to this site. Focus Media, Inc. made no

distinctions as to which content was used, and the links could be to movies, images, or even to music. In fact, many of these links, although containing images of child pornography, were to links to non-pornographic images. Out of curiosity, Charles Wet Dog paid $20 for the service and had a link to the site posted on his home computer. Then he did several things. He initially scanned for child pornography, but it was very difficult to find, and it was so small in relation to the main bulk of the content, that he decided it was not worth it to him. His next step was to send out the e-mail link to his Aunt, who then forwarded to several other e-mail accounts. At this point, Wet Dog saw that the link did not send out to just one person, but rather, everyone had it. His e-mail account was used for a period of weeks before he was made aware of it, and at that time, had no knowledge that the link had sent out. Charles Wet Dog was later arrested and charged with possession of child pornography and distribution of child pornography under 18 U.S. Code § 2252A, although it was not determined whether he was the one who knowingly sent the link. Case History Charles Wet Dog filed a motion for summary judgment, raising the affirmative defenses of (1) the entrapment defense, (2) the self-defense defense, and (3) the due process defense. He also moved to dismiss the charge of distributing child pornography for failure to give sufficient notice to him of his alleged criminal activity under 18 U.S. Code § 1407(c), arguing that the combination

Imagination, compassion, and a little bit of luck. You can rely on these three things to get out of the house in the cold December night. There are no hearts in this game and you will fall for every room in this house! I'd love to hear your thoughts and comments. Thank you! :) I should note that this game is technically a "game" due to the fact that there are actual decisions that need to be made. Disclaimer: Everything in this game was made by me (monterobot) for entertainment purposes only. This game is intended to be a "fear" based experience, and does contain some fairly disturbing imagery. If you're not of the mindset to play this game, please don't play it. You can get out of your house, but you can't get out of your mind. WARNING*. This is a horror story based game with tension and terror aplenty. It might give a few goosebumps. The game itself is about one person, Judy, as she has to get out of the house, but more importantly, she needs to find help. Judy wakes up in her bed with the light on, not a single thing seems out of the ordinary. Judy has a look around the room and finds that the door is locked. The room is as cold as a tomb but it is empty except for the bed that Judy is lying on. She notices a light switch on the wall and decides to turn it on.

The light goes on and Judy is waken up by the sound of a footstep outside her door. Judy decides to investigate her parents death and she goes to the garage, only to find her mother and father lying on the garage floor with their eyes staring at her. She screams and runs to her room, only to find a terrifying figure standing by her bed, a figure she knew nothing about. The figure slowly approaches her. This is where you the choices of the game are made. You can try to jump out the window, but that gives you the chance of a long fall to your death. You could open the door and run away, but the figure will chase you. You can choose to stay hidden and hope the figure leaves, and perhaps one day you will die of "exhaustion" and be "safe" in the end of the game. The choices of the game are just that. There's no dialogue options that you can use. You can

Inter-rater reliability of the Edinburgh Stroke Scale (ESS) in stroke patients. The purpose of this study was to assess the inter-rater reliability of the Edinburgh Stroke Scale. The inter-rater reliability of the ESS was determined by administering 20-point ESS scale assessments (between 30 and 240 minutes after stroke onset) to 34 moderately to severely stroke patients, by four observers at four different teaching hospitals. The components of the modified version of the ESS were videotaped for later review. Mean (SD) inter-rater reliability (kappa) and precision (precision formula) were excellent for hemiplegia (kappa =.80, precision formula =.18) and poor to fair for speech (kappa =.16, precision formula =.08), aphasia (kappa =.18, precision formula =.02), confusion (kappa =.39, precision formula =.16) and slurred speech (kappa =.22, precision formula =.06). By definition, 10-point increases in the ESS score increase the overall survival probability at 7 to 10 days from 14% to 99% (poor to fair inter-rater agreement). Using a previously reported clinical classification system, slightly more survivors with a good outcome had a 20-point increase in the ESS score (2%) than those with a poor outcome (25%) and poor outcome (26%). Poor inter-rater reliability for aphasia and confusion and poor agreement for slurred speech may be the reason why these components have not been included in the version of the ESS which is currently being investigated in an efficacy study. It seems likely that the previously reported classification system, which also uses the ESS and involves three categories (fatal, severe disability and good outcome), would perform better but the smaller sample size does not allow this conclusion to be made.
