An electrochemical biosensor based on the electrocatalytic oxidation of dopamine (DA) has been developed and characterized as a sensitive method for trace detection of triazine herbicides (including atrazine, terbutryn, and prometryn). The DA oxidation reaction in the presence of horseradish peroxidase (HRP) and a mediator such as ferrocene (FC) and o-phenylenediamine (o-PD) has been applied to build a biosensor. A low ionic strength buffer is used to enhance the sensitivity of the biosensor. Under optimal conditions, the linear range for the detection of atrazine is from 0.001 to 1 µg/ml, the detection limit is as low as 4.7 ng/ml, and the maximum concentration of atrazine that could be detected was 100 ng/ml. The proposed approach also allowed the detection of triazine herbicides in real samples (water and plant leaves). The proposed method has been successfully applied for the detection of triazine herbicides.The three-day Om Shanti! festival was celebrated from March 1 to 3 across Bangalore. Highlights Om Shanti!
