The effects of the selective serotonin reuptake inhibitor (SSRI) Paroxetine on inhibition of irrelevant information were investigated using an "anticipatory response priming" event-related potential (ERP) paradigm. Event-related potentials (ERPs) were collected from 26 healthy volunteers as they performed a Stroop color-word task. On each trial, participants were presented with the instruction "Read and respond to the color" and then the instruction "Read and respond to the word", separated by a 500 ms blank interval. The trials were presented in three sessions (a baseline control session, then a Paroxetine session and then a placebo session). Significant differences were found between the Paroxetine and Placebo sessions as indicated by
