

A sequel to my game Ribby The Frogs' Legacy. An RPG/Visual Novel hybrid about finding yourself, acceptance, and frogs. Free to Play on Steam - If the link doesn't work, you'll be able to find it on the game's store page. App Store - If the link doesn't work, you'll be able to find it on the game's store page. Patreon - Just want to say thank you to everyone who supports me on my Patreon! If you can spare a few dollars a month, please, I would really appreciate it a lot! Thank you very much! Current Development Schedule/Progress: I'll be dropping the monthly sprints in favor of a less frequent, more lenient two week development schedule. If I go longer between releases, it'll be because I haven't done any programming or art in a while. If no new work appears in the month, however, it's probably because I haven't worked on it at all. I find that the best way to improve is to make smaller, less ambitious projects and just learn as I go along. What I've gotten so far: Refined the narrative structure, with proper character progression and the early introduction of many of the major themes of the game. More gameplay systems and missions. More main and secondary dialogue lines and new mission types. You can now look for friends and rp, and start building your eidolon. Masses of grammar, spelling, and punctuation fixes. Most of the game's music. Most of the art assets. Begins implementation of the character animations system. The art assets are done, and will be updated as the game progresses. The character animations are nearly done, and will be implemented after the art assets for the game. What's next: Getting the game's intro and prologue to be polished with voice acting and music. I'll be releasing a devlog for the game sometime in the future, but it'll be one month after the game's release. Ending Thank you for taking the time to read this! If you like what you read, please, I would really appreciate it if you liked and shared this devlog. Hey guys! I hope you all had a great first week of December, and are ready for the next update. Today, I have some updates for you, mostly focusing on the new gameplay system for dialogue and

This game is very simple, you have to destroy the enemies. You have a lot of weapons: rockets, heavy turrets, choppers and other types of missiles. The levels are not very big, but of a good level of difficulty. The sound is good and the game is good graphics. You can select the music you want. You can't change to a position to see in what direction you must move. Steam will tell you how to move. You can restart the level. #### What's new:

Hello fellow Starfinder Citizens. I'm back with another community content creation. This time I am back with another set of cards and tiles. We have Starfinder Flip-Tiles to help you create your own custom tiles from this game. First off I want to just go over the contents of this pack. This tile pack contains three printable tile sheets, one for the Starfinder Core Rulebook, one for Space Station Docking Bay, and one for The Deserted City of Mirkari. At this point I only have two of the available tiles included. For the Space Station one I had to outline all the features and have the space station clear for you to fill in. The set itself is not detailed, and it can easily be your own personal addition or your own layout change. The printable tiles contained within are pretty large pieces of paper. This is what you get if you use the exact same paper size as the rulebook. I'm proud of this fact. If you need anything bigger than the printable paper you can always ask for a custom order. You can print 6-7 tiles per page at the most. As mentioned before you can get a custom layout. When it comes to a full color production method, this is pretty expensive. It is very easy to print off per color. I assume this product can also print in black and white. We're starting with a bright color palette of the tiles with silver, red, and black. Obviously this will also depend on how many different purposes for each tile you will be using. As far as printing goes, this is printed on A4 card. Again depending on what you need you can request for some other sizes. Either it's A3 or if you're wanting more size you can go for the A2. Most office printers should be able to accommodate these sizes on their own. Once you get the printable paper cut out, you're going to have to cut out the fish-eye grid, keep them face down for a bit. The printable paper is actual transparency. You need to spread the fish eye grid out evenly over the paper. Then cut out the tiles. I recommend having a pair of scissors to help cut out the grid. When it comes to cutting the tiles you probably want to make sure you have sticky tack and something like an iron on 'tape' on your cutting board to hold everything down.
