By.Q: How to pass a variable from UI to Model in Angular 4? As the question suggests, I need to send data from UI back to the model in Angular 4. The data comes from a text field. Here is how I pass the data to the model: `sendEventToServer() { this.emitter.emit('event', this.productService.products.selected_category); this.form.get('product.selected_category').valueChanges .subscribe(data => { this.productService.selected_category = data.Category; }); }` This works fine. Now I need to pass the selected_category data from the model back to the UI in another function that is being called when the data changes in the text field in the UI: `this.selected_category = this.product.selected_category;` Even though I declare it this way, it never changes in UI. What can be the possible mistakes? A: You need to update the form to reflect the change to the model. So, you'll need to do `this.productForm.get('product.selected_category').setValue(data.Category);` Also, as @Jess has suggested, `setValue` takes two arguments not just one. More details are available in the Angular
