Q: Adding dynamic elements to my application I am using an Infragistics UltraMobileGrid to display a 10X10 grid of images, much like a photo-spread for flipbooks. I would like to have the user be able to add more images to the grid beyond the 10 that is displayed on the first screen. How do I go about doing that? Thank you for your time!

A: Infragistics provide a delegate for dynamic cell creation: `UltraGrid.CellAddHandler`. When this event is raised, the `UltraGrid` calls your `CellAddHandler` delegate method for each cell and marker currently in the grid. This allows you to customize the appearance of the cells and markers.

Example:

public delegate void CellAddHandler(object sender, CellEventArgs e);
public delegate void CellEventArgs(object sender, GridCellEventArgs e); public delegate void GridCellEventArgs(object sender, GridCellEventArgs e); ... [Browsable(false), DesignerSerializationVisibility(DesignerSerializationVisibility.Hidden)] public event CellAddHandler CellAdded; public event CellEventArgs CellEventArgs(object sender, GridCellEventArgs e); ... private void CellAdded(object sender,

---

```
CellEventArgs e) { var field = (MyGridControl)e.Sender;
    field.AddMarker(e.Caption, e.HintText,
e.ForeColor, e.BackColor); } ...

Q: How to refresh a part of screen without redrawing entire screen in Qt? I have the following display on screen: What I am trying to achieve is to be able to move from point A to point B and have the moving text remain over the blue line. So when I move, I want to see the moving text over the blue line on the screen and be able to move it back to the starting point (place it over the spot where the image is displayed). Here is how I display the image: Q

Direct evaluation of the utility of deep QSAR descriptors. QSAR has become a popular tool in the pharmaceutical industry, with many studies being reported in recent years. QSAR methodology has given new insight into the understanding of chemical and biological systems. However, a clear definition of the key factors that control the structure-activity relationship of a molecular system is needed.

QSAR can be used for this purpose. In this work, we use a direct evaluation method to identify the key factors for a QSAR model. The evaluation is performed by fully automatic molecular feature extraction and direct use of molecular graphs as models for QSAR calculations. We also use the extended connectivity fingerprint as the molecular descriptor. The method is developed on the assumption that a low-dimensional QSAR model has been developed as a pre-condition for the direct evaluation. We used the ChEMBL3 database of experimentally determined activities of 210 drug-like compounds against 205 different human targets. The results show that the methods used here can be used to evaluate QSAR models accurately and suggest that for a given QSAR model, the numerical optimization step can be skipped when the chemical descriptors have been selected manually.
