Dason has joined from local football club Maribyrnong Saints on a three-year deal. Dason will link up with his new teammates and coach in the coming days and begin preparations for the new season. Head Coach Craig Starcevich said he is excited to welcome the new addition to the club. "I am happy to welcome Danny to the club as our fourth pick up," Starcevich said. "He has been training with our Collingwood Magpies for the past few weeks so he is ready to step up. "Danny is an experienced player and I am confident he will fit straight in and make a contribution to the club."TORONTO — The first afternoon of the NHL Draft was full of tweets and tall tales, but one exchange in particular — a mock rivalry between Toronto Maple Leafs and Arizona Coyotes fans — has gone viral. At the Draft Combine, Edmonton Oilers defenceman Darnell Nurse questioned the work ethic of Coyotes fans in the media scrum when he said: "They sure don't work hard enough in Arizona." Later that night, Arizona was paired with Toronto to face each other in a pre-draft game. Coyotes assistant coach J.P. Metz, a former Toronto Sun journalist, saw the tweet and decided to make a tongue-in-cheek mock proposal. "I saw (Nurse's) tweet and I was like, 'Let's have a real hockey fan look him in the eye and say, 'I work hard. I'm from Arizona. You want to fight me?'" Metz told The Canadian Press before the game. "I'm a huge fan of Toronto and I had to be like, 'I love hockey so much that I'm willing to fight another hockey fan about it. How is that even possible?'" The two teams split the game 3-3, with the Coyotes taking the first period while the Maple Leafs scored first on the powerplay. Metz and Nurse's first-period antics had a noticeable effect on the game. The fans in attendance were fans of each other, and with plenty of energy and a third period full of players pounding opponents on the ice in the 2016 NHL Draft, the budding rivalry between fans grew. The Coyotes won the game with late goals and offensive performances, but Nurse's antics seemed to be just as important as the final result of the game
