overlay a section of the image in the view. For example, suppose you will have the image which will have some text in the left-bottom corner. We will place an image like the one below in the right-center region of the view. To display this overlay, I've added a layer to the image in `viewDidLoadLayoutSubviews`. This method doesn't seem to be called whenever the orientation changes. Also, I have tried to add the image directly to the view when it starts (there is some content on the page when the application starts). For some reason, it's overlaying the entire screen when I try this. I'd like the image to be placed correctly and dynamically. How can I go about doing this?

A: This is the way I handled these problems:

- 1) I handle the orientation change by checking the device orientation and rotating the image whenever it's needed. - `(void)willRotateToInterfaceOrientation:(UIInterfaceOrientation)toInterfaceOrientation`
