Efficacy of amitriptyline versus desipramine in the treatment of major depression. A prospective double-blind, controlled study. A randomized, parallel-group, double-blind, flexible-dose study compared the efficacy and safety of amitriptyline (Pamelor, Novartis Pharmaceuticals, Inc.) and desipramine (Norpramine, Parke-Davis, Inc.) for the treatment of major depression. Three hundred nineteen outpatients with DSM-III-R diagnoses of major depression were treated with flexible-dose amitriptyline (50 to 150 mg/day) and desipramine (50 to 200 mg/day) for 8 weeks. Response to treatment was determined by blinded re-evaluation, and the data from both amitriptyline and desipramine were analyzed by an intent-to-treat analysis. Response to therapy was associated with therapeutic plasma levels of amitriptyline (200 to 450 ng/mL) and desipramine (600 to 1400 ng/mL). Efficacy with both treatments was similar: Fifty-two percent (158/309) of the patients responded to amitriptyline and 50% (154/309) responded to desipramine; there were no statistically significant differences between treatments. The CGI-Improvement (a measure of global improvement) score showed no statistically significant differences between treatment groups. It also showed a gradual improvement in both treatments. The HAM-D, the Hamilton Depression Rating Scale, showed significant improvement of depression in both treatment groups (p). It's estimated that at least 100,000 people will soon be invited to sleep outside in Glasgow this autumn, in the hope that cool nights and plentiful sunshine could make a difference for people struggling to keep warm in this year of wildfires and heatwaves. In the case of operating systems, such as Unix, Windows and BSD, the term "superuser" has a well defined meaning. In particular, "superuser" typically means "someone with full administrative privileges" or "someone who cannot be logged into directly but can operate the machine as root". When dealing with a database, such as MySQL, a "superuser" can be simply a user who is allowed to connect without passwords; or it can also mean someone with "MySQL database administrator" privileges. In other words, MySQL gives the creator of a database certain privileges, the right to access, create, modify and drop it. "Superuser" privilege is one such privilege (just to list some among others). But I'm also starting to notice that you can have a user's privilege 0cc13bf012
