GameTyrant.com - Nov 23, 2018 This is the most action-packed and exciting scenario, yet most intense scenario of War Chronicles Mode, "The Battle for Yan Province", where on the heart of Yan Province, General Valera and his soldiers fight back against the invading Zhang troops. As of the 5th Wave, here, we will introduce the last two scenarios of the Battle for Yan Province before the grand finale, "The Great Revolution", where together, Valera and his supporters, also including Huangzhou and Thule factions, fight back against the oppressive occupying forces from the big brother and will make a stand to reclaim their original Yan Province. With a huge battlefield covered in snow, and only signals as passages for communications, Valera and his heroes, with the help of Grandmaster Zun Tian and his minions, try to hold on in the final weeks before the final defeat of the Zhang Empire. The weather is bitterly cold. The Zhang Empire forces have surrounded the city and are prepared to end Valera's rebellion once and for all. Meanwhile, in the deep south, it seems that the rebellion has been crushed with no word of a rebellion. In a last-ditch effort to save his people and preserve his legacy, Valera formulates a desperate plan, which involves the sacrifice of his loyal beloved friends and family. The plan is to strike the final blow to the Zhang empire. If he does then there will still be some hope in this dying world With the advent of this grand campaign, the Chinese version of War Chronicles will lose some of its previous free-form play of the first 4 wars, including Strategic Movement phase and stat skills, and up to 7 heroes could be selected from the plethora of fallen heroes across the different eras of the map. In addition, Hero Slots and Gold respectively become limited and require additional application of a hero bribe or transaction to obtain. In addition, the same in-game map will be used for each empire, even though you can zoom out to 180 km from the current map range. Role of the player heroes could also be limited to 7 heroes in this battle of the last empire.
