From the creators of the critically acclaimed Broken Age, a vision-perfecting, pocket RPG, about a silent girl who awakens with amnesia in a fantastical world. Recruit allies to help break free from your amnesia, explore a living world and unravel its secrets, and ultimately, to help you overcome your own. After a long journey, you've finally arrived in the town where you met your best friend, Hopper, and where you used to live with your mother before your family was torn apart. But you quickly notice that something is wrong. A frozen lake. A cracked and damaged wall. As you start to awake, the reality that this is not your world starts to sink in and you start to realize that the memories and experiences you're having, while they seem like real memories, are actually fragments of someone else's life. Unfortunately, that someone else is you. You don't know your own name. You don't remember anyone else. You don't remember anything. And you have no idea why or how you got to this strange town, nor what you should do about it… Content: Soundtrack: You can use some of the FMV dialogs of the game and take part in the sound design when you play the game for the first time. The Furry Woof Soundtrack is the third album by Swedish dubstep and electro producer Richie Rekhi. Despite the intimidating-looking title, the album largely consists of collaborations with British electronic artist Danny Byrd from bands such as Dizzee Rascal, Kano, Killa Kela, and Ranking Roger's The Herbaliser. It is his first album released through Hard Wax Records, following the success of his debut album Ransom, released under the alias Rekki. Musically, The Furry Woof Soundtrack'''s style has been described as recent dubstep and glitch hop. In addition to collaborations with Danny Byrd and Ranking Roger's The Herbaliser, the album features a collaboration with French singer Tegan & Sara on a track entitled "At the End". It also includes vocals by Bryan Russell (Reverb2) on a cover of Rage Against the Machine's "Bombtrack", which is featured on the album's final track. Production The album was produced over the past few months after the success of his debut album Ransom, which came out in May 2010. As with Ransom, The Furry Woof Soundtrack features mostly music with sparse lyrics and electronica. The track "Scream on the Run" features Killa Kela, the hip hop group formed by UK rapper Lemar. "Scream on the Run" was later released as a single, and also features Lemar on his own song on the album, "Full of Life". The song "Cyanide" uses a sample of the song "Diggin' in the Crates" from the group Massive Attack's 1993 album Lemon Dixi', with vocals from the band's frontman, Robert Del Naja. This was specifically done by Richie Rekhi for Massive Attack's drummer, Juliet Roberts, who according to Murphy often voice lines for sample clearance. The samples from Del Naja's vocals of the song were later remixed by Rekhi to become "Cyanide", and subsequently included as a bonus track on the UK CD edition of Massive Attack's 2010 album Mezzanine. The track "WTF" features Gospel of Pie from the band Aphex Twin, and features vocals and drums from Winston Blissett. It also features the stop-start stereo hook as employed by Aphex Twin on James "The Funky" Ford and Richard D. James. The song "Violent Hellion" features vocals
