Blood City is a small 2.5D, top down, space exploration game. This is what happens when humans take off on an adventure and explore space. The Earth's weather is beginning to break down and so is the peace and harmony. Governments are feeling the effects of bloody conflict and the world is desperate for a new direction.

Some up and coming countries are fleeing from the chaos and are now seeking independence. For some reason they have decided to take the first step towards their independence by building military UAV's called "Blood Cows". Blood Cows are an old design but mankind have a bit of an advantage over the aliens. Aliens don't have the ability to think logically, they are quick, but overly simplistic and violent.

As a leader you take command of the UAV's to take back the Earth, and then you simply take down the bad guys. The aliens keep destroying essential human equipment, we can fix that later.

So without further a do let me introduce you to Nikhi, your savior in this story. This game is a mix of tunnel shooter and space stage. You can fly all over the planet with a catapult and jump to any position. When you fly at high speed you should not be able to land, when you land you will be picked up and taken away. Sometimes gravity works against you and you will land on the ground and lose some of your energy. When you get enough energy you will be able to make it

But a chance to run single-lap qualifying laps in two NASCAR Cup Series races, Saturday and Sunday, have been limited to a tight circle of drivers since NASCAR introduced the former "Daytona 500-style" qualifying format in 2011. Only drivers who have qualifying around Bristol Motor Speedway qualify for the qualifying races. NASCAR mandated the changes to qualifying formats at Daytona because of a perceived difficulty fans and Tv viewers had watching the races. The changes included extending the qualifying trace to 120 laps, eliminating the field of cars to 16 for the Daytona 500, eliminating the tog is driver, including the Qualify of the crew chief of Erik Jones, who will be in his first Cup race on the SiriusXM Radio-broadcast Daytona 500 in March, qualifying 18th. He has driven in his first Cup race since then this weekend and has six to go before he can race at Las Vegas Motor Speedway. After his qualifying run
