Sara Naniche (1899-1940) was a Hungarian Jewish writer and Zionist who became a secretary to the founder of the Palmach, Yitzhak Guttman. In 1931 he was a volunteer in the Haganah struggle for the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine. He was killed by the Germans during the Holocaust.Q: No visible @interface for 'UITextField' declares the selector 'clear' I want to use a text field to delete a number (and the next line). This looks pretty simple, but I have problem to convert the code from Apple. I converted the code like this: - (IBAction) clear:(id)sender { // Get the text field UITextField *aTextField = (UITextField *)sender; // Get the string from the text field NSString *textToDelete = aTextField.text; // Get the next line UITextField *bTextField = (UITextField *)[aTextField superview]; // Delete the string bTextField.text = nil; [aTextField removeFromSuperview]; } But I get this: (29084): libxpc.dylib`_xpc_connection_send_message: 0x195000: 4294967203 f70f 2c0c 1200 4d1c 3f00 0005 c400 d438 3f00 0000 I can not understand what my mistake is in my code and I also had no problem with the other code with 'clear'... Can somebody help me? A: The problem is that the code is trying to access a superview from a subview. I don't think there's any way to do what you want if you're trying to keep the hierarchy of subviews in place. You'd have to use some sort of bridging/interaction to make it work. If you're willing to lose the superview, you can use the textField:willChangeValueForKey: method to access aTextField in your viewController. That will return nil if it's about to be removed from the superview. Alternatively, you could have the textfield in a container view and
