Jon Nguyen University of Oregon, PhD candidate Hometown: Portland, OR Favorite Band: The 1975 What I'm Playing: Out of time - The 1975, Earth is a Beautiful Place - The Beach Boys, The Family - George Clinton, The Features - Sufjan Stevens, Incentives - The Black Keys, Up All Night - The Black Keys Social Media Links: PhD student with a history and philosophy of music as my main focus. I'm also an avid karaoke enthusiast and an amateur fashionista. Contact me at any time via twitter (@PhDjNguyen) to shoot the shit. My Ph.D. dissertation examines the recently discovered phenomenon of "overreaching meanings," or meanings that are intentionally overstated or manipulated. In a similar vein, "underreaching meanings" can be described as the extent to which a band's lyrics become an accurate reflection of the actual situation faced by the band. In other words, "underreaching" is the opposite of "overreaching." Is it possible for an album cover to tell a lie? This is what I am trying to answer, and a large part of my work focuses on the critical aspects of album covers as a window into the motivations and culture of the band. I have recently been trying to get better at something. I have been trying to be more active on Facebook - mostly learning where to properly use the Facebook newsfeed. I have also been working on visualizing the parts c6a93da74d
